Sirs

I am what I think is a 'standard user' meaning I use Microsoft products for my work and at home.

I work in a bank which has standardized on Microsoft products and from a user's perspective they work, they talk to each other and we rely on Microsoft to sort out problems of compatibility.

Breaking up the company or charging massive fines is simply not right and will have a negative impact on a company that helps keep America ahead of the world.

Can you imagine the French doing this?

I think that sometimes we do not realize what we have here.

The settlement in my view is totally fair and I question the motives of those seeking to overturn it.

Apart from being a user of their products I have no involvement in the company and do not own any shares or have any financial interest in the ultimate decision.
